A Civil War Whaling Ship Makes Philatelic History

By Robert W. Murch

The time was during the hot, tense month of June, 1862, when General Robert E. Lee assumed command of the Army of Virginia, the place was New Bedford, Massachusetts, whaling capital of the world, and the ship was the stout Yankee whaler Globe bark-rigged, Alexander A. Tripp, Master. The voyage that followed, though a routine voyage for a Yankee whaler, resulted in an unusual and interesting philatelic item to delight any stamp collector or student of postal history.

The item in question is the account book of the expenses of the whaling bark Globe, registered out of New Bedford and typical of the Civil War whaling fleet that roamed Pacific waters to insure a steady supply of whale oil during the critical years of the Great Rebellion.

Whaling ship records indicate the Globe was laid down at Duxbury, Massachusetts of 215 tons burden, became registered out of New Bedford in 1850, and commenced long and honorable service as a whaler on extended voyages in 1850, 1855, 1858, 1862, 1865, and 1869, completing her last voyage to the whaling grounds in May, 1872, when the new petroleum industry of Pennsylvania sounded the death knell of whale oil requirements in the United States.

Of the aforementioned voyages, the stamp collector has a definite interest in the voyages of 1862 and 1865, during which time Civil War tax measures were responsible for many interesting revenue stamps, as well as interesting extremes to collect revenue when revenue stamps were not available. This, then, is the philatelic voyage of the good ship Globe.

Our ship's account book indicates the Globe cleared New Bedford port on June 10, 1862, and arrived back home on August 29, 1864, a cruise of 2 years, 2 months, and 19 days in quest of the wary whale.

Master and captain of the Globe was Alexander A. Tripp, Andrew M. Tripp, first mate, George H. Little, second mate, and Albert J. Tripp, third mate. Officers and men in the crew totaled twenty-four, including four boatsteerers for the whaling boats, two coopers for the barrels needed, a cook, a steward, two able seamen, five ordinary seamen, and five "green" hands.

Upon return to New Bedford in August of 1864, Captain Tripp and his harpooners had accounted for 906 barrels of whale oil, which fetched the sum of $49,514.52 in Yankee dollars.

At this point came the traditional paying off of the crew and division of profits after a successful voyage with resultant compliance with the Civil War tax laws.

The two pages following are a reproduction of a double page from the account book, showing the debits and credits for the second mate, third mate, and a boatsteerer for the entire voyage. The man's receipt for the balance due is entered under his account and signed by him. The receipt tax in each case was paid by a 2c Black Jack, initialed and dated by him also.

The tax applicable to the paying off of the crew of the Globe was the receipt tax of 2c which said in part . . . "2c to be paid on all receipts for payment of any sum of money or debt due exceeding $20 or for the delivery of any payment."

This revenue law had been in effect since the summer of 1862, and to provide for the proper collection of all taxes due, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue authorized the Philadelphia bank note company of Butler & Carpenter to produce the handsomely engraved first issue of United States revenue stamps, ranging in value from 1c to $200, which appeared in September, 1862.

The tax law further provided that only specific revenue stamps were to be used on specific documents such as contracts, mortgages, conveyances, probates, certificates, exchanges and the like. This system proved unwieldy and lasted only until December 25, 1862, when the revenue stamps could be used without regard to original intended use.

This, then, was the situation in New Bedford in August 1864, when the crew of the Globe shuffled forward to be "paid off" in the presence of Captain Tripp and Charles Tucker, owners' agent. Of the original crew the account book indicates George Dorecon, ship's cooper, died at sea during the first two weeks of the long cruise, Harry Williams, able seaman deceased, John Burt and William White, seamen, deserted at St. Helena in March 1864 during the long voyage home, John Johnston, boat-steerer, put ashore to hospital after 469 days at sea, and John Grady, seaman, left the ship in 1863. The rest of the crew stepped up one by one to the account book, checked the deduction made against the ship's "slop chest" for clothing and tobacco purchased at sea, and then, bank draft or cash in hand, tumbled ashore with over two years' wages to spend in New Bedford town. Precisely at this point the ship's agent produced a sheet of two cents stamps to legalize the 2c tax receipt, and fortunately for the stamp collector of present day, the only 2c stamps available were a sheet of 2c "Black Jacks", issue of 1863 with the full face of Andrew Jackson, one of the most popular postage stamps ever issued by the United States!

As the muster was called, master, mate, harpooner, cook, steward, and seaman, all came forward and initialed "Black Jack" across the face with date and name, initials, or "X" ("his mark"), indicating the Federal Treasury was 2c richer to help finance the guns for Gettysburg.

A closer look at the account book indicates what the whalers were paid after two years at sea risking life and limb against the elements and rampaging killer-whales. As was common in the whaling fleet, the paychecks at the voyage end were based on "lay shares" of the whale oil cargo, with the Captain entitled to the most "lay shares" and the "green hands" the least "lay shares."

Our Globe paybook witnessed by the staring "Black Jacks," row on row, shows the following pay for the crew after 812 days at sea:

|---|---|
| Captain Tripp, 1/14 lay share of $49,514 plus bonus on 606 barrels of oil, | total, $4149. |
| Albert J. Tripp, 3rd mate, 1/55 lay share, | total, $ 900. |
| Thomas Sloan, boat steerer, 1/85 lay share, | total, $ 582. |
| James Robertson, ordinary seaman, 1/167 lay share, | total, $ 318. |
| John Rogers, "green hand," 1/200 lay share, | total, $ 251. |

In the instance of the "green hand's" pay of $251 for 812 days at sea, this averages out at 31c per day wages or a little more than 1c per hour for the back-breaking "character building" duties of a sailor aboard a whaler during the Civil War era.

Another page from the account book (opposite), from the second voyage, with the receipt tax paid by 2c orange Internal Revenue stamp.

New Bedford Mass 2 Mo 19th 1866

Received of Charles Luther Agent of Bark Globe Five dollars in full of all claims I have against the Owners of said Bark for the Service of my Minor Son John H Burt in said Bark. Said Son having deserted from said Bark at St Helena in March 1864 John Burt

Release of claim by the father of a sailor (a minor) who had jumped ship at St. Helena on the homeward voyage. Receipt tax paid by a 2c orange Internal Revenue stamp.

The Globe account book runs for three voyages and also includes the June 1865 to August 1868 voyage which netted $65,411 in whale oil and the final voyage from March 1869 to May 1872 which netted $38,909. For the 1862 voyage and thereafter, the "lay shares" divided among the crew represented 31% of the proceeds of the voyage, with the owners getting the final 69% out of which they paid all the vessel's expenses except the wages paid to the crew.

This interesting account book, interesting both to the stamp collector and the student of maritime history, includes 23 "Black Jacks" of 1863 used to pay receipt tax by crewmen and 19 "U. S. Internal Revenue" 2c orange, 4 "Bank check" 2c orange, and 3 "Bank check" 2c blue of the First Issue Revenues used as receipts for the second and third voyages.

The present owner acquired this possibly unique item from Dr. E. Lee Dorsett of St. Louis, collector and historian of our Yankee Whaling Fleet.

Thus ends the salty saga of "Black Jack and The Whales."
